

Home > Destinations > Thailand > Chiang Mai > Inspiration

INSPIRATION

THESE ARE THE PLACES ASIA'S TRAVEL EXPERTS MOST WANT TO GO IN 2022

Need inspo of where to go in 2022? We asked some of the most influential people in Asia's travel industry for their this-year bucket list.

COURTESY OF CEMPEDAK ISLAND

By Gayatri Bhaumik
Jan 10, 2022

Top Stories

WHERE TO GO IN 2022

IT'S SAFE TO SAY THAT two years into the Covid-19 pandemic, we've all grown a little weary. Ever-changing restrictions and hard-to-navigate border controls have put paid to many of our travel plans. But as vaccination rates increase and countries move towards a "living with Covid" strategy, there's an air of hopefulness among those of us with wanderlust. Some of us are making plans for the year ahead, and we're not the only ones.

HOTELS & RESORTS

THIS $21,000-A-NIGHT PRIVATE ISLAND IN INDONESIA CONJURES THE CASTAWAY...

Eco-chic Bawah Reserve is adding six private residences on a new island.

been nearly two years since I've been there, so it'll be great to catch up with staff in person," Dixon says. "There are a few other places in Indonesia I'd like to visit, including Misool Eco Resort in Raja Ampat, and I'm also keen to visit the Philippines."

Charlotte Harris

Who is she? Managing director of Hong Kong-based agency Charlotte Travel, Charlotte Harris has spent the last two years navigating ongoing challenges. After smaller-than-planned wedding celebrations, a postponed honeymoon, and being apart from friends and family scattered across the globe, she's hopeful that 2020 will see people traveling again, albeit more mindfully.

Where to go in 2022? “I think this halt has been a reminder that we need to relook at travel in a more meaningful and sustainable way,” Harris opines. “Visiting family and friends will be a priority in 2022, and I’m hoping to get back on track with planned trips to Paris—I’m eager to see the new Cheval Blanc—Oman, New Zealand, Tahiti, and a stay at The Brando.”
